THE SKIN TONE OF JESUS CHRIST

Due to the fact that the bible does not contain images, we have no definite answer to the question of what did Jesus look like. All of the evidence that we have comes from passages within the bible. When searching for an image of Jesus via Internet, you can see that Jesus has been portrayed as a white Caucasian man. But when looking at scripture, it is clear that he was not white. Based off of the fact that his mother was from Nazareth and father being from Bethlehem, the origin of Jesus is most likely middle eastern. Bethlehem and Nazareth are located in the modern day Israel. This points to the fact that Jesus was born with a Jewish complexion. The people of Israel typically have a olive/light brown skin tone due to being exposed to a lot of sun light. Do not just take my word for it, the scripture reveals all of this. "For it is evident our Lord was descended from Judah(Hebrew 7:14)."

"As some historians and theologians have posited, the silence of the Scriptures on the issue of Jesus' skin color is critical to Christianity's broad appeal with people of various ethnicities. In a world where race often divides communities and even churches, the Biblical depictions of God's son positions him as one who can bridge those divides. Those warnings hold just as true for believers today. Within the church, eschewing a Jesus who looks more like a Scandinavian supermodel than the sinless Son of God in the scriptures is critical to maintaining a faith in which all can give praise to one who became like them in an effort to save them from sins like racism and prejudice. It's important for Christians who want to expand the church, too, in allowing the creation of communities that are able to worship a Jesus who builds bridges rather than barriers."
